To whom it may concern,

As the team lead of an agile process development team I had the pleasure to have Christophe Foyer as one of four team members. A model development project was assigned to us that most colleagues deemed impossible. Christophe was up for this challenge and largely thanks to his skills the project was a big success. He showed himself to be a creative programmer and always found a way to make things work. He was flexible when priorities changed and was firm when he defended his vision. I trusted him to be responsible of the final code and he did not let me down in that. During the project he familiarized himself with collaborative code management techniques and even trained the whole department in this. I have no hesitations in recommending him to any employer that can give him a challenging technical job. Feel free to contact me when desired.

Kind regards,
